1 WARM-UP about 5 min

Welcome back, Ana and Lucas!

🎧 1 Three warm-up questions (audio in the page)

1 Tell someone about the last time you went to the beach.

2 Have you ever been sunburned on holiday? What happened?

3 What is something you take for granted in your daily life?

Use past tenses: "I was lying on the beach when…" · "By the time we arrived, they had already left." · "As I was saying…"

Last summer I was lying on the beach when I realised I had forgotten my sun cream. By the time I got back to the hotel, my shoulders were burning.

Mia: You look so tanned! How was the beach?

Dan: Honestly, it was worth the price. But on the second day I was so busy talking that I forgot my cream, and now I'm sunburned.

Mia: Oh no. Did you put on moisturizing cream afterwards?

Dan: Yes, a lot. By the way, as I was saying, the food was amazing. We had grilled prawns with a side dish of rice.

Mia: Jealous! I'm fed up with the office. I've been dealing with bureaucratic forms all week.

Dan: Hang in there. Do you need help? I can make it up to you for missing the meeting.
Mia: Thanks. I just feel overwhelmed. Hold on, my phone is ringing.

Eastvale Debates a New Housing Tax

🎧 9 Listen while you read (about 1 minute) (audio in the page)

Rumours spread online this week that the city of Eastvale will introduce a new tax on small apartments. The mayor's office says the claim is a hoax. According to the council, no such plan exists, although housing prices have risen sharply over the last five years. Local economists say that low-paid and unskilled jobs now make up almost a third of new positions, which makes renting very hard for young workers. A tenants' group reportedly asked the council to carry out an exhaustive study of rents. "People are fed up with bureaucratic delays," said its spokesperson, "and they should not have to take decent housing for granted." The council is said to be preparing a public meeting next month, and a guarantor scheme for tenants is alleged to be under discussion, although officials have not confirmed it. Critics argue that the fear of new income tax rules shows how quickly an unverified claim can spread.

A Answer in full sentences. Then compare with the model answer.

1 What claim spread online, and how does the council respond?

The claim is that a new tax on small apartments will be introduced. The mayor's office says it is a hoax.

2 Find words or phrases that show these are reports, not facts.

says, according to, reportedly, is said to, alleged

3 Why is renting very hard for young workers?

Housing prices have risen sharply and many new jobs are low-paid or unskilled.

4 What does 'take decent housing for granted' mean here?

To assume that decent housing will always be available without effort or cost.

B Discussion

1. Why can an unverified claim spread so fast online?

2. Are low-paid jobs undervalued in your country? Give an example.

Useful language:

I couldn't agree more | That's a fair point, but... | According to what I've read... | It is said that... | Even though... | It depends on...

Your summary

According to the Eastvale council, a new tax on small apartments does not exist, and the mayor's office says the rumour is a hoax. Housing prices have reportedly risen sharply over the last five years, and local economists say that low-paid and unskilled jobs make up almost a third of new positions, so renting is very hard for young workers. A tenants' group is said to have asked the council to carry out an exhaustive study of rents, because people are fed up with bureaucratic delays. The council is also said to be preparing a public meeting, and a guarantor scheme is alleged to be under discussion, although officials have not confirmed it. The text shows how quickly an unverified claim can spread online.
